Skeletons of Extinct Bird.

Of the ten known existing skeletons of the great auk in the world, the United States is the only country possessing two. Greater Boston has these, one being in the museum of the Boston Society of Natural History and the other in the Harvard university museum.

The Boston museum contains also an egg of this extinct bird. In view of the fact that a single egg has brought as high as $535, this is considered a most valuable relic.

This flightless sea-bird formerly was distributed along the northern coasts and islands of North America. In its coat of color with a vest of sooty white it resembled nothing so much as a short man in evening dress. Since it was flightless, the bird was easily exterminated, the natives relishing it as a food. It probably was wholly exterminated by 1844.

Havana's High-Sounding Name.

The full name of the capital of Cuba is San Christobal de la Habana. In 1834 a royal decree conferred upon the city the sounding title, "Llave del Nuevo Mundo y Antemural de las Indias Occidentales," which signifies "Key of the New World and Bulwark of the West Indies." In emphasis, the coat-of-arms of the municipality bears a symbolic key and representations of the fortresses of Morro, Punta and Fuerza.

In 1650 the city rose to be the commercial center of the Spanish-American possessions, and the principal rendezvous of the royal fleets that carried on the trade monopoly between Spain and America.

First Malleable Platinum.

The first veritable platinum ingot was made by a French chemist, Chabaneau, in 1781. Charles III of Spain had called him to Madrid and created a special chair of mineralogy, physics and chemistry for him. In his laboratory he found the secret of rendering the new metal malleable, and this is the way he revealed the fact to one of his patrons: "Three months later, at the home of the Count of Aranda, there appeared upon a table an ingot some 10 centimeters cube (about four inches), with a beautiful metallic luster; it was malleable platinum."—New York Herald.

Telephone Rates

And the prices which the public is asked to pay for Telephone Service

To be just and reasonable, telephone rates or prices must cover the costs or rendering the service and leave a profit that will attract to the telephone industry a continuing supply of capital which is constantly required for extensions and improvements.

If rates yield more or less than such amount they are not just. If they yield more they are excessive and unreasonable. If they yield less they are unreasonable and are against public interest because they result in a deteriorated service and capital is no longer attracted but directed to other industries that are more profitable and possibly the products of many such industries are of less importance to the public.

The present rates we believe to be just and reasonable. They were approved by the Postmaster General and are effective by Act of Congress.

These rates are now being reviewed by the Public Service Commission of Oregon, which body assumes jurisdiction since the government turned back the telephone properties to private ownership.
